Far from the busy world s detested noise, Its wretched pleasures, and distracted joys; a Par Far from the jolly sools, who laugh, and play, f And dance, and sing, impertinently gay, r Their short, inestimable hours away; Far from the studious sollies of the great, . The tiresome farce of ceremonious state: There, in a melting, solemn dying strain. Let me, all day, upon my lyre complain, . And wind up all its soft, harmonious strings, To noble, serious, melancholy things. And let no human soot, but mine, e er trace The close recesses of the faced place: Nor let a bird of chearful note come near, To whisper out his airy raptures here. Only the pensive songstress of the grove, Let her, by mine, her mournful notes improve; While drooping winds among the branches And fluggish waters heavily roll by. Here, to my fatal sorrows let me give The short remaining hours I have to live, Then, with a sullen, deep setch d groan expire. And to the grave s dark solitude retire. To Cl E One; . . FROM the bright realms, and happy sields above, The seats of pleasure, and immortal love; Where joys no more on airy chance depend, All health to thee from those gay dimes I send! For...
